I. About the Department

- The Department of Arabic is one of the oldest departments of the University of Delhi which came into existence with the very inception of the University in 1922. It enjoys a good name and high repute in the learned circles of India and the Arab world. In the beginning all the three disciplines Arabic, Persian and Urdu shaped a coherent common entity and later each got separated. The Department of Arabic as a full-fledged department came into being in 1978.
- In recent years, some important UGC projects have successfully been completed under the guidance of some senior professors of the Department. In order to bring teachers and scholars of different Indian universities closer together and to work jointly for the betterment and bright future of Arabic language in India, the Department is closely associated with "All India Association of Arabic Teachers & Scholars" and is playing an active collaborative role in conducting meetings, seminars, lectures, workshops and many other academic activities time to time.
- The Department of Arabic offers full time programs of M.A., M. Phil. and Ph.D. degrees, and also enrolls students for part-time courses of one year duration each, which are known as Certificate, Diploma and Advanced Diploma in Modern Arabic. Expanding its scope of studies, the Department has also started four open elective courses for master level students of other disciplines. This course is a point of attraction for a large number of students coming from diverse departments of the University. Students from foreign countries like Afghanistan, Iraq, Syria, Indonesia, Palestine, Jordan, Niger etc. have also chosen the Department for their advanced studies. Most of our Passed-out students are engaged in academic and non-academic national and international institutions. Their preferable working areas include teaching at university and school levels, working in translation bureaus of government and non-governmental sectors; foreign embassies and engaging in other excellent jobs in India and also in the Middle East.
- The M.A Arabic Programme is divided into four Semesters. Each Semester has four courses. Four core elective are offered in semester IV for the students of this programme while two open electives are at offer in semester II and IV each for the students of other departments, to make students aquatinted with all periods, shades and styles of Arabic language and literature. The literature is taught period wise such as classical and modern literature etc. Further, the job oriented courses like translation, communicative skills and computers also make strong components of this Programme. History of Arabic literatures is also included in M.A Programme; so that the students may become aware of the literary changes occurred in various stages. An especial emphasis has been given to the translation and communicative skills, so that students may become capable of translating different texts on political and economic topics. In this way emphasis has been given to make the programme job oriented.
- The M. A. Arabic Programme courses are updated on a regular basis. To begin with, a committee of teachers is formed. The Committee looks for the changes, taking place in the pedagogy and courses of Arabic departments of other universities. It also sometimes consults the pass out of the department who are working elsewhere in different capacities. A draft course is uploaded on the department website to seek feedback from the students and their guardians. After going through the feedback and consultations final draft of the course is formulated and after due approval, it is implemented.
